Property values continue to fall

Assessed value of city down $8.5 million

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The assessed value of real estate in the city of Lawrenceburg is down nearly $8.5 million from the previous year, according to figures released late last week by Property Value Administrator Brian Stivers.

The decline marks the fifth consecutive year of decline of real estate in the city, which is down just over $12 million since 2010. That year, the city's assessed value stood at $542,260,147. This year it stands at $530,167,902, a decline of about 2.25 percent.

"It's a disappointment," said Mayor Sandy Goodlett. "It means the local economy is not doing as well as we would like."

Stivers released the figures following a full reassessment of the city, which is done every four years. He said part of the reason for the decline is that homes that previously sold for $100,000 now don't bring that much money.

"You could get $100,000 for almost anything," Stivers said. "Most of them are now $90,000 to $95,000."

The city wasn't alone in its declines. Figures show that the countywide assessed value is now $1.287 billion, a drop of just under $2 million from the previous year. Assessments countywide are up nearly $7 million, but the city's declines resulted in the overall decline.

Since 2010, the county has seen its assessed value increase about $27.5 million, the bulk of that growth coming from the expansion of Wild Turkey.

Stivers said a major factor in the overall decline is a state increase the homestead exemption, which a reduced assessment for those 65 and older or 100 percent disabled. That deduction increased this year from $36,000 to $36,900.

Goodlett said the loss won't affect his budget plans.

"It won't significantly change what we're doing in terms of taxing," he said.

Based on the city's tax rate of $1.95 per $1,000 of assessed value, the $8.5 million decrease would result in just over $16,500 in less revenue.

Janie says goodbye

Bowen ends 40-year career with The Anderson News

By John Herndon

It's a good thing Janie Buntain got her car started back on May 28, 1975.

She was to start working at The Anderson News that morning, but her mode of transportation had other ideas on making the trip from her parents' home on Benson Creek Road to downtown Lawrenceburg.

"I had a car that Daddy's older brother had given me. It was a '62 Buick, and I hadn't even driven it," Janie says. "I went out and couldn't get it started. I went to our barn, and Daddy came out and got it started."

Little did Bertram Buntain know he would be sending his daughter to a career that has taken her to every nook and quite a few crannies of Anderson County, but has also allowed her to share the good and bad, the joys and heartbreaks of the place she's called home since her teenage years.

Cop cars damaged after man in women's clothes leads police on high-speed chase

By Ben Carlson
News staff

An Indiana man was taken into custody early Tuesday morning after leading police on a high-speed chase that ended when his pickup truck got stuck in a creek bed in Mercer County.

Michael A. Gibson, 38, of 490 Rocky Meadow Road, Salisbury, Indiana was chased down after allegedly driving off without paying for $30 in gas at the 4 Way Stop and Go in Lawrenceburg.

When police captured him, officers said that Gibson was wearing what appeared to be tight women's pants, a woman's coat and fuzzy boots with pink ribbons attached.

The chase, which included speeds of over 100 mph on US 127, resulted in damages to two cruisers operated by the Lawrenceburg Police Department and one operated by the Anderson County Sheriff's Office.

None of the officers were injured during the chase.

The Anderson County Sheriff's Office responded to the gas theft complaint when officer Michael Corley saw Gibson driving on US 127 Bypass.

Corley attempted to stop Gibson at the intersection of US 127 Bypass and US 62, according to his report. That's when Gibson reportedly accelerated to 85 mph and headed south on the Bypass, passing several vehicles at speeds in excess of 105 mph, according to Corley's report.

The chase crossed into Mercer County, where Gibson turned onto

'Janie-of-all-trades' made journalism what it is intended to be

She may be just a smidgen over 5 feet tall. But when it comes to service to her family, faith, and having had a fantastic career in the newspaper business, no one stands taller than Janie Buntain Bowen.

The years we had together, working as a team in building The Anderson News into one of the most award-winning, respected, and successful weekly newspapers in the history of Kentucky journalism, will be forever cherished. When my tenure as publisher began with a meeting of the staff in the fall of 1978, who would have thought the ever-smiling, humble, and cute-as-a-button kid off Benson Creek would play such an integral role in making community journalism in Anderson County what it was always intended to be?

Don White
Former publisher

Janie has always been a "people person," and in the role she would come to have as a reporter, she brought joy and recognition to dozens upon dozens of deserving citizens, delighting the readers with not only her excellent "down home" way of telling their stories, but with her outstanding photography as well.

It always gave me great satisfaction to attend awards banquets held by the Kentucky Press Association and see our Janie walk away with numerous first place honors in categories ranging from breaking news stories to photography.

She never once got all that excited about the awards, even when I told her she was beating out college graduates who had spent four or more years majoring in journalism. About as close as she ever came to boasting about her work was those weeks when we'd produce what we both felt was one of our better papers, and she'd say it was "terrific."

Janie came a very long way during our tenure together, and I did too, thanks to her wisdom, kindness, and good heart.

I suppose her title at the time we first met may have been "composition department assistant" or something of the sort.

Titles have never meant much to me, and I know they are totally meaningless to Janie.

Call her what you want, regardless of the assignment, you could always rest assured you were going to get her best effort without one second of complaint. Our "Janie-of-all-trades" never shied away from the most mundane of tasks, be it changing a light bulb and sweeping snow off the sidewalk or being the general manager of her own weekly newspaper in Springfield.

Some of my favorite times spent with her were delivering newspapers on Wednesdays, laughing and talking as we hit all the country stores in Anderson and some surrounding counties. Looking back, I know that was a form of stress relief for us both, plus keeping us in touch with the news in all corners of the community, talking to people like Ralph and Norma Dennis and Janie's future in-laws, Nila and J. F. at Bowens Grocery.

Producing a weekly newspaper can be a lot of fun, but it also requires lots of dedication and hard work when doing it correctly, even if it means working into and sometimes throughout the night, as Janie did on more than one occasion.

I recall interviewing a man in Lawrenceburg once on the occasion of his retirement from a government job. I asked him what the one thing was he would never forget. He had to think long and hard before answering. "I guess it was that night we didn't get out of here until about 10 p.m.," he replied. I had to chuckle, thinking about Janie. She would call that "vacation."

May her vacation be long, happy, and simply terrific.

JANIE

Along the way, Janie has won numerous accolades from readers and journalistic peers alike.

Janie Buntain Bowen is retiring this week, just over 40 years after that day her car balked.

Janie's original plan was to call it a career last Thursday, May 28, making it an even 40 years. However, with The Anderson News office scheduled to relocate the following day, she decided to stay on another week to help with the transition and to further train her successor in the front office, where she has been working for the last few years.

It is vintage Janie Bowen.

Her mark on Anderson County cannot be measured and is undoubtedly far more than anyone could have envisioned when she walked through The Anderson News office doors the morning after graduating from Anderson County High School.

"Ann Whitt was the guidance counselor at the high school. She came to (business) class one day and said The Anderson News is wanting to interview if anyone is interested," Janie remembers. "She came back later that day and asked for me specifically. She just called me to the door. She said, 'You might not take this job but I feel it would be a good experience for you.'"

Good experience, indeed. It has been that for Janie Bowen, for The Anderson News and for Anderson County.

It is the only job Janie Bowen has ever had, except for a three-year period when she left Lawrenceburg to serve as manager of The Springfield Sun, another weekly paper owned by Landmark Community Newspapers.

"I had talked with Frances Garrison (then an editor of the paper) and she told me I had the job if I wanted it. I don't even remember if she told me what the job would be," Janie recalls. Nothing could be more fitting for a career that started with linotype, wood presses and photo film, but now runs on high-tech computer programs and digital photos. Along the way, Janie has worked as an office assistant, composition worker, writer, photographer, editor and sales person.

There have probably been a few other jobs along the way.

"When I went in there to the newspaper office, I thought, 'What have I gotten myself into? There was the newspaper and at the time they sold office supplies, too. I thought I wouldn't be there very long. I was going to be a farmer and help Mama and Daddy on the farm,' she says of the 300-acre home place.

"I remember that first day, Mama looked so sad," Janie recalls. "I said something to Daddy that night and he said, 'Your mama cried this morning after you left.'"

Fellow workers Evelyn Sparks and Alberta Sparrow taught the teenager how to use all of the machines used in putting the paper together. And Sparks might have been the one to push Janie to her place among Kentucky's most-respected community journalists. Landmark had moved Don White to Lawrenceburg to run the paper in 1978. The Garrisons, Frances and her brother, Elliott, had owned the paper for years and retired soon after White arrived.

"After the Garrisons left, Don was the only person there who could take a picture," Janie remembers. "Evelyn Sparks told him, 'You ought to let (Janie) take pictures.'"

At the time, Janie's photography experience consisted of taking pictures with a Kodak Instamatic with a bulb cube. But she had shown Sparks some pictures she had taken and the newspaper veteran was impressed.

Her first assignment was simple: Take a photo of a local resident.

"Don sent me out with an Olympus camera to take a picture of Matt Utterback. He had gotten a letter from President Carter. I didn't know what I was doing and just stood there to take the picture," she says.

As she tells the story, Janie imitates herself shaking nervously. Then she breaks into that familiar broad smile that has greeted Anderson County residents for 40 years.

"After that, Don sent me out and told me if I ran out of things to do in the office, just go out and take pictures and take pictures of anything that moves. I took the camera out one day and when I came back, I had taken a picture of two people at a garage."

"He asked me, 'Why did you take that picture?'"

"I told him he had told me to take pictures of anything that moves. He laughed and said it was great."

Soon after, Janie was taking pictures of everything from school functions to farmers to sports photos.

"When I started taking sports pictures, I had to learn to anticipate," Janie said. "Don sent me to Rutherford ball field one night and he was thrilled with that."

Eventually, the girl who had planned on milking Holsteins and working in tobacco was a regular at basketball games. It was at one memorable game she believes she missed one of the best pictures she could have taken.

It was in the 1984 30th District Tournament at Shelby County High School. Anderson County and Shelby County, two of the Eighth Region's best teams, had been paired in the semi-final round by the luck of the draw.

Jim Freeman was fouled just as the final horn sounded. He went to the free throw line, standing alone, to shoot free throws in the bonus situation. He missed the first one.

"I stood there and watched him take that shot," Janie remembers. "I was right there. When he missed, he dropped to his knees and was crying. I felt so sorry for him that I couldn't take the picture. He was distraught. Sometimes you miss shots because you are so wrapped up in what is going on.

"But you learn that is what you want. Those shots tell the story."

Over the years, Janie changed from that backward girl who had rarely traveled past Lawrenceburg and the surrounding towns to the ultimate professional whose only training was experience.

Her biggest test might have come in the fall of 1998. The office scanner erupted with the news of a bad wreck in rural Anderson County. White usually handled those cases, but he had left the office for some reason. It fell on Janie to cover the news.

"It was a Tuesday, right around lunch time. I had a scanner I carried with me. On the way to the accident, it came over the scanner, 'We need help. We need it now.'"

Two boys, twins, had been riding their bikes when they were hit by a motor vehicle. Both died.

"When I got there, I looked over the scene and saw (Anderson County EMT) Terry Duckwall. I walked up to him and the look on his face was that this was bad.

"I walked over and saw (police-man) Todd Evans giving one of the boys CPR. He asked me to take some pictures of the scene for the police. Then I saw the crumpled bicycle next to the ambulance. I thought that was the picture."

But the driver of the truck, a teenager, was still at the scene, sitting at the barn.

He was sobbing uncontrollably.

"I thought, 'I have got to take this picture,'" Janie says. "I was about 50 feet away. I usually didn't take pictures like that, but I felt compelled to take it."

The photo was picked up by the Associated Press and was published in newspapers nationwide and received national acclaim. It was a photo Janie knew she had to take, but wishes she didn't.

"I caught some flak for taking the picture but had some people call and say they were glad we ran it because it made them think differently of the boy. It made them see he was hurt, too," she says.

The following year, Janie accepted an offer to talk about the photo at an industry workshop.

"I got aggravated when someone asked me about the notoriety that came with the picture," she says. "I told them I wished it had never happened"

It's part of what has made Janie successful and respected. She has never forgotten that the newspaper business is largely that of telling people's stories, whether good or bad.

"There have been several pictures that I have taken over the years that upset people," she says. "There have been times I have covered wrecks and did my job, then cried all the way back to the office."

There have been other tears shed, such as the time she covered her own cousin's burial at Arlington National Cemetery in 1994.

Clayborn Ashby had been a Navy SEAL flying to a mission when shot down over Laos in the Vietnam War. Rescue teams never found the crew and eight men been listed as missing in action for 26 years when relations between the United States and Vietnam thawed some. The crew's remains were turned over to the United States but individual identifications were impossible. They were all buried together in one casket.

"The only thing that identified that plane as his was he had a chain with his girlfriend's ring on it. That is how they knew," Janie says. "I knew him, but not well."

Janie and former Anderson News staffer Dwain Harris traveled to Washington where they were the only media members to witness the ceremony.

"Everyone wanted it covered, except for one family," she recalls. "Because I was family, I was able to go."

Janie has covered everything from a hostage situation in downtown Lawrenceburg to celebrations of people becoming centenarians to an award-winning photo layout of a church holding a baptismal service in the Salt River. While Janie has never been much of a sports fan, she's also won statewide sports awards for both her writing and photography skills.

The desire to run her own paper pushed her to Springfield for three years, but her heart never left Anderson County. The pressures of management prompted her to look elsewhere but when the opportunity to return to The Anderson News presented itself, the decision to come back was an easy one.

Times have changed. The papers produced in 1975 routinely carried items from every part of the county as correspondents told who visited who. Such columns are a thing of the past today.

"We even had a column from Heritage Hall (nursing home)," she says. "You can't do that today because of HIPPA laws."

Some even say newspapers are dying in the media-rich days 40 years later. As someone who has worked through the changes while remaining true to herself, Janie believes newspapers provide a service and are often under appreciated.

"I don't know if it is because so many move into the county with no history here, but if you read the paper, you will find out what is going on," she says. "I have had people tell me that wherever they are, they want the local paper. That is a good idea."

It is fair to say The Anderson News will not be the same after Janie Bowen heads into retirement. She'll spend time gardening with her husband, Steve, and will be more available to help care for her mother, who lives in a nursing home.

"I have worked here ever since I got out of high school," she says. "I don't know how that will be. I am kind of dreading my last day."

When she drives away, though, it will be in her late model Ford Explorer.

If she can get it to start, that is.

By any name, Janie's a pro

By John Herndon
Sports editor

I call Janie Bowen, "Fred."
At least sometimes I do.

Then there are times I call her, "Ida Lee." If you don't know who that is, think about "Hee Haw" reruns. Ida Lee is that Roni Stoneman character, always yelling at her husband, Laverne in those hilarious skits.

It's just to aggravate Janie. She believes I do not consider it a successful day unless I have found some way to annoy her big time. And, over time, she has learned to return the banter.

We won't tell Janie, but I only give goofy names to those I highly respect, and make no mistake, I highly respect Janie Bowen for who she is as a member of the news media and even more for the person she is.

Some might find it hard to believe that someone who writes sports for a living - that's me - would have such high esteem for someone like Janie, who admits to preferring a trip to a flea market above watching the Wildcats. But in reality, so many of the media types I have run into in my career don't come close to Janie Bowen on my respect meter.

The reason is very simple: Janie's knowledge of what makes Anderson County tick can't be measured, whether it is a story about an elderly person, a farmer doing something unusual or a kid just being a kid.

As a sports editor, I found that while Janie Bowen is not a huge fan of the games, she totally understands what the Anderson County Bearcats have meant to the community for many years. She knows nothing unites the county like high school sports and has supported our efforts to bring the best coverage we can.

Over the years, I have seen numerous people work at The Anderson News. Although some did not accept it, every one of them had a friend in Janie, who always tried to make sure things were better for others in the office.

Honestly, I hate to see her last day approaching. That's because there is another thing I call her to everyone else. She's the ultimate professional.

Janie met husband while on the job

Janie Buntain Bowen has changed in many ways since she started working for The Anderson News on May 28, 1975. The most noticeable change is her name.

She has been married to Steve Bowen for 15 years, a union that came about as a direct result of her work with The Anderson News.

"I went to Western High School for a basketball game," she remembers. "John Wayne Conway was there and had just won his first race for magistrate. I knew him and went over to say, 'Congratulations on your race.'"

Standing next to Conway was Steve Bowen.

As Janie tells it, a few weeks earlier, Conway had brought in information for a political ad, but there was a spelling error in the copy. She caught the mistake and and Conway told his friends that she had done so.

"Steve was standing there and just looked at me. It made me feel funny. I didn't know until later who he was. That was in 1981," she says.

The couple dated for 17 years before tying the knot.

Her eyes crinkle as she breaks into a laugh.

"I thought, 'I have to get away from this person.' I ended up marrying him."

Deficit or cushion?

County's financial picture not easy to decipher

Column as I see 'em ...
I've spent the past several weeks trying to decipher just exactly what is going on with the fiscal court's budget that was formally approved Tuesday morning, and have concluded that the county doesn't really have a $400,000 deficit.

When one thinks of a budget deficit, what comes to mind is not having enough money to meet one's obligations.

That doesn't appear to be the case with the fiscal court, which in its own budget forecasts having surplus revenue totaling just short of $625,000.

Wrap your head around that for a moment. That would be like having your home budget include thousands of dollars beyond what you forecast it will take to live, yet telling your family that without borrowing thousands more, you simply won't be able to make ends meet.

I've discussed this with Judge-Executive Orbreys Gritton and Treasurer Dudley Shryock, who say that the reason the surplus is so high is because it includes $400,000 the fiscal court has already approved to borrow to close what they call a budget deficit.

OK, but that leaves $225,000 in surplus revenue, which is hardly what one would consider a deficit.

What's more, when the fiscal court closes its books on the current budget, it typically does a final budget amendment that strips unspent dollars from various line items and pushes them back into the budget as additional reserves. Most years that is somewhere around $200,000, give or take.

Given the above, if the fiscal court doesn't borrow a penny it's looking at having $400,000 or more in surplus, which makes me wonder why any money needs to be borrowed in the first place.

Granted, $400,000 might be cutting it a bit close. Between July 1 when the new budget kicks in and October when property tax revenue begins to flow, the income side of the county's budget can be mighty thin.

But looking back, in 2010-11 the fiscal court had a surplus of about $470,000 and muddled through just fine. In fact, since 2007-08, the average surplus has been around $700,000.

In the current budget, which ends June 30, the forecast was for a surplus of just over $1 million and nearly as much the year before.

I'm told that those numbers didn't materialize, but even with shelling out hundreds of thousands of dollars on recycling, it's hard to see where upwards of $800,000 was spent beyond what was scheduled in the budget.

I do know that while discussing this with Gritton, he did say that some of the money being borrowed will act as working capital in the coming months, allowing the court to demolish the brick building at the corner of College Street and Ollie Bowen Way and replace with a small maintenance building, along with getting a football field in the county park.

Fine projects both, but perhaps a hard sell for those who genuinely thought that the reason money had to be borrowed was exclusively to balance the budget, and even harder sell to those who left behind the supposed deficit and can go nowhere without it being thrown in their faces.

Speaking of having something thrown in your face ...

You didn't think I'd let the letter from C.J. Adams go without some sort of rebuttal, did you?

I love it when people take me to task, and love it even more when they actually have a cogent argument about what I've written.

Unfortunately that isn't the case with this letter.

I'll set aside the insult about my eyesight, which is actually fairly good for a 50-something guy who stares at a computer screen all day.

As for the snide remark about being a "small town editor," I consider that a compliment, if for no other reason than the diarrhea I see spewing out of most "big town" newspapers these days.

I'll also leave out the note attached to the letter in which Adams doubts I have the "character" to print the letter, mostly because it's an ignorant thing to say.

As for the rest, Adams should check his own vision, or at least comprehension skills. It's the judge-executive, not me, saying how much the county spends on recycling, is losing on recycling, or anything else about recycling. I'm simply reporting what he says.

What's more, if Adams is such a regular reader, he or she would know full well that I've advocated long and hard for recycling, and donated a considerable amount of free advertising for the program before it metastasized into the tumor it became.

I thank you for reading, C.J. Adams, but try not to be such a "Debbie Downer" when it comes to the facts.

Speaking of a downer ...

I am equal parts happy and sad that Janie Bowen is retiring after 40 years with The Anderson News.

Happy because if anyone has earned her retirement, it's Janie.

She's a tireless worker who can do anything asked of her and goes to great lengths to ensure that this newspaper is as good as it can be.

Sad because we are losing someone who is the personification of what a community newspaper should be.

We will miss Janie more than words can tell.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Carlson a real 'Debbie Downer'

To the editor:

I am an out-of-towner, but I visit my sister in Lawrenceburg frequently, such a nice town. I read The Anderson News regularly, have been following the news about your recycling program, and have read just about enough of the bad publicity, I think all brought on by the "Column as I see 'em" small town editor. If I see the "hundreds of thousands of dollars" cost for recycling used one more time as a scare tactic to make the community think recycling is too expensive, I think I'm just going to pop.

I think this editor needs to get some better glasses, though I'm thinking he's probably just not an advocate of recycling.

I've lived in several communities with successful recycling programs. Guess what, not one of them makes a profit on what they collect. But they've stepped up, put the funds in their budgets and decided it's important enough to do so. Last week's article talked about reducing the community's program to focus on just cardboard. I think that's a bit of a cop-out. I believe your community currently has one of the best programs I've seen in small communities and you should be commended for it.

The trailers are well maintained, they are well dispersed among the community, and they are available 24-7 for every resident and business to use, very convenient. And, your county accepts many more items than most community programs. That's awesome. I've heard you guys have some of the cleanest recyclables in the region. Has your editor ever mentioned that? Didn't think so! He's quite the "Debbie Downer."

So let's say Mr. Carlson is actually telling the truth, that is, the county is spending $175,000 to run the recycling program. Is that too expensive? There are a little over 8,000 households in the county. Simple math tells us that the cost of the program is a whopping $22/year per family (let's see, that comes to a little over $1.82 per month). Is your community really saying you can't afford that? I bet your editor would argue that he shouldn't have to pay for recycling with his taxes if he wasn't using the service. Well, you could say that about lots of things in the county's budget.

As far as I'm concerned, $1.82 per month is a very small price to pay to help preserve our country's resources. Recycling (of much more than just cardboard) should be standard service in every county's budget. So, I really hope you guys think hard before downgrading your program, just to save a couple of bucks a month. You've got a great thing going and have set a good example for not just your kids but also for the counties all around you. Best of luck.

Not a "Debbie Downer."

Baseball coach was blessing

To the editor:

I want to take a second to thank a man in the Anderson community for what he did in making me a man.

John Halvachs was not just my high school baseball coach but a friend, like a father, and most importantly someone who believed in me. Even 20 years after graduation he continues to care for me and tell me he is proud of me. I know I am not the only one he has touched. He was a blessing to many baseball players in 1994 as being hired as baseball coach of the Anderson Batcats.

In that time John had taught me personally so much, mostly by listening and sincere effort to care about me and others on our team.

John H. is in my prayers daily as he struggles with his body keeping up with his witty brain/heart. As I reflected how easily a kind heart can get overlooked. After telling him how I felt on the phone today, he deserves more than that.

I was telling my son more about him and how more people should set an example for others by simply being a genuine good person. Being a coach, teacher, parent, neighbor, sister, co worker etc., is a chance to touch someone's life.

Life is hard and knowing someone truly cares and believes in you might make the difference they need to give more, seek help, work harder, live better and maybe change others lives; paying it forward because you simply had faith in them.

I know most people have a handful of people who helped pave the path they are in, and most have parents to help do that.

However I did not. God used John and the Peak/Jenkins family as pawns in my life to help guide me and mold me and I am very blessed. John, know you will continue to live through others and make a difference in this world. John you believed in a group of kids others turned their backs on or ignored the potential in them and, because of you, we are better fathers, coaches and athletes.

You taught us to believe in people and ourselves.

Thanks, coach, for being you.

Sandbox 'disgusting'

To the editor:

The [above] sandbox in the county is disgusting and it has looked like this for years.

During every visit with my son there's a battle over that nauseating thing.

If the county doesn't want to put sand in it, take the darn thing out!

Reduce your risk of being victimized by identity thieves

Over $2.5 billion were lost to identity theft in 2012. Victims younger than 18 represent 16 percent of the total.

The perpetrator is almost always a family member, frequently the parents.

Parents who have financial problems will use their child's social security number to fraudulently obtain credit cards, apply for loans and even employment. The children don't have any idea until they later apply for jobs, credit cards or loans and find out that they have a negative credit history themselves.

Social security numbers are the gateway to identity theft. Users of social media need to be careful about what is posted on their accounts and who can see it. If you want your friends to remember your birthday, just use month and day and only allow friends to see it. Be careful about providing information about where you work, too.

Florida leads the nation with 37,059 reported cases of identity theft in 2012. Government documents or benefits fraud was the most common at 52 percent of the known cases in Florida. The next five uses of identity theft were credit card fraud, bank fraud, phones and other utilities, employment and loans of any type including mortgages, college loans, and car loans.

Some thieves will only steal your information and leave your credit cards in your wallet, along with the money so you won't think anything is missing. Your identification and credit cards can be stolen by taking a photo of them. You may decide not to cancel those cards because nothing was missing. Think again and cancel those cards before a huge bill appears and those account numbers are used for other purposes.

Reduce your risk by never carrying a social security card in your wallet. In April 2015 a federal law was signed by the president to remove social security numbers from the Medicare card. It will take time to issue new cards. I don't know when the transition is scheduled to begin or the expected date to complete the process. In the meantime, only carry your Medicare card when you plan to visit the doctor.

You don't have to provide your social security number just because someone asks for it. Many businesses have requested it in the past because it makes a simple identifier for you and they don't have to make their own system. Always ask how the social security number will be used, how will it be protected and is it necessary. You may want to talk to a manager if you don't get the answers you need.

Time to prune peonies, pinch mums

June has arrived to bring us closer to the summer solstice and 15 hours of daylight each day. June has been the most popular wedding month since Roman times, because they were practical planners.

Think about it. A June marriage meant childbirth in the spring, not the dead of winter and no interference with the fall harvest. Plus, the weather is usually pretty good for outdoor events.

Work in the garden and lawn is now in high gear, precisely because of that weather.

Not only are we thinning fruit on the trees, we're renovating the strawberry patch, pruning the peonies, pinching mums and dividing iris. It's also time to mulch the vegetable garden and plant your pumpkin, cabbage, cauliflower and broccoli seeds for a fall harvest.

If you're in a race with your neighbor to produce that first ripe tomato, you can cheat a little by applying a hormone called Blossom Set to speed things along. Most garden centers carry it and all you do is spray. While you're out, pick up some oyster shells to add to the soil after the fruit sets.

If you're thinking of adding a little colorful diversity to your landscape, be sure to research the plants you want thoroughly. It makes no sense to do all that digging if the plant is not going to be happy there.

Be aware of drainage and soil requirements along with how much sun your spot will get, before you put anything into the ground. Don't forget to imagine the plant at its full grown size, before you go crowding things in to make a big splash.

Azaleas and rhododendrons need acid soil and full morning sun. They like filtered sun for the afternoon. Lilac bushes like soil that is well-draining, not high in acid and full sun.

Roses like rich, well-draining soil with full sun. There are so many different types of roses out there you really should shop around and mix it up. My other mother is really into roses. There are miniatures, hybrid T's, climbers, floribundas, antiques, you name it, she's got it. Mixing colors and sizes just adds to the beauty and the length of the show.

Adding color to shady spots has gotten a lot easier of the last 20 years. Botanists have developed all kinds of new colorings to tickle our fancy. Hydrangea bushes give you height and color for the back of the shade garden. Foxglove and astilbe are shorter, with different shades of green foliage along with their colorful blooms. Hostas provide a shorter tier with a big variety of colorful leaves, but only tiny flowers. Finally, begonias (though annuals) can carpet the ground with color from both their leaves and their blossoms.

Whatever new thing you're planting in the yard, just be sure to make the hole big enough to help those little roots form well, before they have to start flexing their muscles into the hard packed stuff. Wait a few days before you fertilize anything. It's shocking to the plant to adjust to its new living conditions, so give it a few days.

Now, get out there and see what's growing. It may only be June, but the fire-works have already begun. Blooms are exploding everywhere and while Mother Nature has, so far, been generous with her watering, be prepared to help her along as we move into summer. Check those hoses. That generosity may only go so far. Happy growing.

Adding warm-season annuals to grazing system offers several advantages

Warm-season annuals thrive in the heat of July when temperatures exceed 75 degrees F and other grasses are struggling. During this time cool-season grasses decrease in plant yield, and quality as the plant goes into the reproductive stage. This time frame is called the "summer slump." Utilizing warm-season annuals during the summer may reduce or end overgrazing of cool-season pastures and the need for feeding stored feeds.

Animal performance

Reduced animal performance as a result of reduced bite size and increased walking distance to obtain an adequate amount of forage can also occur.

Renovation

Warm-season annuals are commonly used when renovating pastures for fall seeding. These species can be used to decrease weed and erosion issues before perennials are seeded in the early fall.

Commonly grazed warm-season annuals include sorghum, sudan-grass, sorghum X sudangrass hybrids, and millets. Sorghums, which are a single

These warm-season forages should be seeded after risk of frost. Mid-May through early-June is the ideal time to plant warm-season forages. They can be seeded by broadcasting followed by cultipacking, seeded with a grain drill into a well prepared, firm seedbed, or seeded using a no-till drill. Weeds and other vegetation need to be controlled. Planting earlier may give more harvests and a higher total yield. Apply lime and fertilizer according to soil test results. Recommendations state that 60-80 pounds of nitrogen per acre be applied at or near planting and another 40-60 lbs. applied after each harvest if additional harvests are planned.

Utilizing these forages can be beneficial when grazing livestock with high nutrient requirements throughout the hot summer months, and can be grazed up until frost is expected in the fall.

Do not graze after a non-killing frost because regrowth can be toxic.

Also do not graze after a killing frost until material is dry (the toxin usually dissipates within 48 hours).

Alleged ToyBurg embezzler arraigned

Wolverton indicted for hacking local toy distributor's PayPal account to buy drugs

From staff reports

A Lawrenceburg man indicted for embezzling nearly $20,000 from Lawrenceburg-based ToyBurg was scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday in Anderson County Circuit Court.

David Wolverton, 29, of 228 Hunter Ridge Drive had access to ToyBurg's PayPal account and allegedly transferred just over $19,000 into an account under his mother's name.

Wolverton was indicted by Anderson County Grand Jury on May 5 on one count of theft by unlawful taking and as a persistent felony offender, according to court documents.

The embezzlement was first reported to police last September by the owner of ToyBurg, an online toy store that ships products worldwide from its Lawrenceburg location.

Owner Steven Seeberger called police, telling them that he had already confronted Wolverton about the missing funds and that Wolverton said he was using the money to purchase Suboxone, a drug used to treat opiate addictions, according to court documents.

Wolverton allegedly told Seeberger that he was funneling money into his mother's account as a ruse to keep his wife from finding out about his addiction, according to police reports.

Wolverton faces a persistent felony offender indictment based on two previous felony convictions. He was sentenced to two years in state prison in 2011 after being convicted of theft by unlawful taking of over $10,000 in Woodford County, and three years in prison in 2013 following a similar conviction in Fayette County.

He was also convicted in 2005 on three counts of burglary, receiving a stolen firearm, theft by unlawful taking over $10,000 and theft of a controlled substance. He was given a five-year sentence on those charges, according to court records.

Wolverton began working at ToyBurg in December of 2013, three months after being sentenced to three years in prison in Fayette County, according to court records.

Woman killed in wreck on Bluegrass Parkway

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A Lexington woman was killed Sunday evening when a car she was a passenger in veered off the Bluegrass Parkway and slammed into a cluster of trees.

Beverly F. Miner, 70, and her caretaker, Shaniah Walden, 19, of Richmond, were traveling to Lexington from Elizabethtown, where they had just picked up a puppy for Walden, according to Anderson County Coroner Dr. Mark Tussey.

Tussey said Walden was airlifted to UK Medical Center for what appeared to be serious injuries but was scheduled to be released the following day. The puppy also survived the wreck, he said.

Miner was pronounced dead at the scene.

Office, said the cause of the wreck remains under investigation.

Armstrong said the vehicle was traveling east when it left the roadway and traveled around 360 feet along the shoulder before hitting a cluster of trees at highway speed. Walden, the driver, was ejected from the vehicle. Miner's body was trapped inside and had to be extracted by members of the Anderson County Fire Department. Tussey said it did not appear she was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the wreck.

Tussey said the women were not related and that based on an interview with Miner's family, Walden was her caretaker. He said the women traveled to Elizabethtown to pick up a puppy as a gift to Walden's son.

Following the wreck, Tussey said Walden told him that she swerved to avoid another vehicle that entered her lane and went off the road.

The wreck took place around 6 p.m. near the Anderson-Mercer county line. Also responding were the Kentucky State Police and Anderson County EMS.

Tax incentives OK'd for Four Roses expansion

Move expected to create 10 jobs when completed

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax incentives were preliminarily approved last week for what is expected to be a major expansion at the Four Roses distillery here along with new warehouses at its facility in Coxs Creek in Bullitt County.

Details of the expansion are expected to be released during a news conference scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday at the distillery on Bonds Mill Road.

According to information released by the Kentucky Economic Development Finance Authority (KEDFA), the distiller will spend $34.1 million at its Anderson County plant to expand its existing facility by adding production capacity to meet growing demand. That investment includes $22.9 million in equipment and $11.2 million for construction.

The expansion will provide 10 jobs upon completion and as many as 15 jobs in 10 years. Those jobs, according to KEDFA, will include an average hourly wage of $38, including benefits.

In Coxs Creek, the expansion includes $19 million in building construction and $19 million in equipment.

Judge-Executive Orbrey Gritton welcomed the news and confirmed that the Anderson County Fiscal Court has agreed to provide $40,000 in tax incentives over the next 10 years.

"This is great for our community," Gritton said. "We need this kind of economic growth and development. I'm just happy they chose to do this in Lawrenceburg and not Bardstown."

Lawrenceburg Mayor Sandy Goodlett confirmed that the city will provide $50,000 worth of in-kind services that include engineering.

The latest expansion news comes on the heels of an announcement in March of a $8.4 million expansion to its bottling plant in Bullitt County, along with a $500,000 visitors center at its Cox's Creek location.

Beta Sigma Phi hands out awards

From staff reports

Several awards were given out and new officers installed during the May 18 meeting of Beta Sigma Phi.

Carol Hollander was named the organization's "Girl of the Year," and Pam Brough received the group's 2015 First Lady award, according to a news release. Brough chairs the Anderson County Chamber of Commerce and Anderson County Tourism Authority along with promoting the Anderson County Humane Society and Post 34 Auxiliary. She received an Anderson County afghan from the group, along with a Beta Sigma Phi cookbook.

Program of the Year honors went to Karen Hawkins and Ann Case.

Perfect attendance awards went to Bonnie Barrick and Glenda Thompson.

Officers installed were Holly Peyton, president; Rita Phillips, vice president; Marla White, recording secretary; Pat Hanks, treasurer; and Paula Cardwell, corresponding secretary.

The group announced that scholarships were given to Cameron Peyton, Rebekah Cardwell and Sydney Stratton.

The meeting was held at the home of Glenda Thompson and included salad and dessert.

The next meeting is scheduled for July 6, during which the club will celebrate its annual birthday party.

Carrico earns Eagle Scout

From staff reports

Lawrenceburg resident Avery Brice Carrico earned the rank of Eagle Scout during a ceremony March 11 at South Elkhorn Baptist Church, according to a news release.

He was a member of Troop 400 at the time and is now a member of Troop 37 in Lawrenceburg.

The 14-year-old is a son of John and Shelia Carrico.

For his Eagle Scout project, Carrico coordinated the construction of two canoe racks for the Kentucky State Police Trooper Island. More than 150 hours went into the project between October of 2014 and January of 2015.

He conceived the idea while on a canoe trip to the island in 2012, when he noticed the island did not have any storage racks to protect canoes from harsh weather.

For his efforts, Carrico received a certificate of appreciation from Commissioner Rodney Brewer of the Kentucky State Police.

A scout since 2011, Carrico has earned 30 merit badges and has completed all of his Eagle Scout requirements.

Darnell named to School for Arts

From staff reports

Anderson County High School student Dudley Darnell III has been accepted to the Kentucky Center Governor's School for the Arts, according to a news release.

Darnell was accepted into the vocal arts program, which is scheduled for Danville's Centre College from June 21 through July 11.

During their three-week stay, 256 student artists from 47 counties will be immersed in a rigorous schedule of daily seminars, master-classes, lectures, hands-on workshops and field trips to regional arts attractions, according to a news release.

The program will culminate on July 11 with an all-day festival that celebrates the achievements of Kentucky's young artists.

From punch to pudding, bananas are just great

So, how do you like your bananas? Firm, with a tinge of green? Yellow, and no spots? Or soft and speckled?

I prefer mine just barely ripe with no spots. If I'm baking banana bread though, I use bananas that are almost black. The riper, the more stout the flavor. Bananas, like most fruits, are very versatile and add a delicious, sweet flavor to any food or drink. This week's column is all things banana. I've included three of my favorite banana recipes.

Who doesn't love a cold, refreshing punch? I know punch is a beverage normally served at special occasions. Let me tell you though, the next time punch graces your menu, try this one.

Banana Slush Punch

Serves 50

4 cups sugar
6 cups water
1/2 cup lemon juice
46 oz. Orange juice
46 oz. Unsweetened Pineapple Juice
5 large, crushed bananas
5 quarts chilled ginger ale

Boil to dissolve, and then cool water and sugar. Add rest of ingredients except ginger ale. Freeze in 1/2-gallon size containers. Thaw about one hour or until mushy consistency. Before serving, add two large bottles of ginger ale.

Who doesn't love banana pudding? There are many variations of the recipe out there - creamy and cold, runny and warm. My mom always made it hot, when I was growing up and it was divine. I realize I may be in the minority, but I never was a fan of the 'Nilla wafers served with cold banana pudding.

Lucky for me, I ran across a recipe several years ago that used a different type of cookie and put a twist on the classic dessert.

Oh. My. Goodness. This is hands down the best banana pudding I've ever had and I'll never use another recipe. Give it a shot!

Chessman Banana Pudding

2 bags Pepperidge Farm Chessman Cookies
6-8 medium bananas, sliced (not very ripe)
2 cups milk
5 oz. Box vanilla instant pudding
8 oz. Cream cheese, softened
14 oz. Sweetened condensed milk

Ashley Fields

Cooking Columnist

1 pint whipping cream, whipped

Line the bottom of a 13x9 glass pan with one bag Chessman cookies. Layer sliced bananas on top of cookies. In bowl, combine milk and pudding mix. Beat well, set aside. Using another bowl, beat cream cheese well. Add condensed milk to cream cheese. Beat. In 3rd bowl, whip cream. Fold cream into cream cheese and condensed milk mixture. Add pudding/milk mixture as well. Stir well. Pour over bananas. Cover with remaining bag of cookies. Cover and refrigerate. I like my cookies soggy. If you do too, let it sit overnight.

Chances are, you either love this last recipe, or you've never even heard of it. Hummingbird Cake; thought to have originated in Jamaica in the late 60's. There are no birds in this cake, but rather it was thought to be sweet enough to attract hummingbirds. This cake boasts three layers, replete with pecans or walnuts- your choice, and cream cheese frosting. It's different from most cakes in that it's made of oil, not butter, requires no beating, and has more fruit than flour. It reminds me of a very moist banana bread.

Hummingbird Cake

3 cups all purpose flour
1 tsp baking soda
1 tsp salt
2 cups sugar
1 tsp cinnamon
3 large eggs, beaten
1 cup vegetable oil
1 1/2 tsp vanilla
8 oz. can crushed pineapple, drained
1 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
2 cups chopped bananas

Combine first five ingredients in a large bowl. Add eggs and oil, stirring until dry ingredients are moistened. Do not beat. Stir in vanilla, pineapple, pecans, and bananas.

Pour batter into 3 greased and floured 9-inch round cake pans. Bake at 350 for 25 to 30 minutes. Cool in pans on wire rack for 10 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely.

Frost with Cream Cheese Frosting. * You can add pecans (1/2 to 1 cup) into frosting or sprinkle on top.*

Cream Cheese Frosting

11/2 blocks cream cheese, softened
3/4 cup butter, softened
16 oz. powdered sugar
1 1/2 tsp vanilla

Beat first two ingredients until smooth. Gradually add powdered sugar until light and fluffy. Stir in vanilla.

Bible shows it's never too late to change

It's never too late to change. Is that really true?

Recently a friend shared about a men's small group he was part of some years back. He said that without exception each man shared that they had tried and failed to change themselves.

As Christians they could not figure out why? They had followed all the religious rules and world's suggestions, but no success.

That exchange caused me to recall reading a verse in the Old Testament years ago that stopped me cold. It was one of those times when you see something that you never saw before, and you have to explore it till you know the truth. As a new parent, that discovery altered forever how I saw my children and ultimately myself and viewed change.

The passage, Psalm 128 vs 3: "Your wife shall be like a fruitful vine within your house, Your children like olive plants around your table." At the time I lived in Napa Valley, Cal., with a vineyard bordering our property. I suspect that made me more ready to see the clue than any other time in my life.

What I saw was vines don't produce olive plants. Several days after reading that passage I was preparing for my freshmen world history classes and looking at some of Michelangelo's paintings from the Sistine Chapel. His visual of the creation of man caught my attention. I hadn't noticed it before, but Adam and God's fingers weren't touching. I realized at that moment Michelangelo had captured exactly what that verse was saying.

We humans aren't, if you will, an extension of the creator and our children aren't an extension of us. Resemblance is there, but they are not an extension of us anymore than we are an extension of the creator.

Then two more verses added another dimension to the insight. In Proverbs 22 vs 6 it says: "Train up a child in the way he should go, Even when he is old he will not depart from it." The word-in and way-caught my attention. And, in Proverbs 30 verse 19, way appeared again, but this time in multiple applications: "The way of an eagle in the sky, The way of a serpent on a rock, The way of a ship in the middle of the sea, And, the way of a man with a maid."

My curiosity continued to be piqued as I began to view my children, my students, myself and others differently.

Had it not been for some comments from a man I had just met my insight might have ended. But, Chuck Swindoll opened the door to see and understand those differences. There really was hope for change if you viewed things from God's perspective.

Sure there were similarities, but it was the differences that made each unique.

That is where the little word-in-became important. I had to discover, cooperate and help them develop those unique differences. That was my role.

At first I wasn't prepared for that approach.

I simply didn't have the ability to change myself let alone anyone else, but the resource within me could bring about the desired change.

That same resource was what my friend's group discovered. Today, they have experienced a new success in their efforts.

That is why real Christianity is not a religion, but a relationship with the person who has the power to cause change to happen. It is never too late to change.

WHERE ARE YOU PLACING YOUR AFFECTIONS?

Everyone has his/her affections set on something. Where have you fixed your affection, on the world, or Christ?

Where your affections must not be:

- On self – Romans 12:3; 2 Thess. 3:2; 3 John 9
- On sinful ways – Luke 15:11-32; Luke 8:14; Gal. 5: 19-21
- On the world – 1 John 2:15-17
- On money – 1 Timothy 6:9-10

On what must we place our affections?

- God – Matthew 22:37
- Christ – 1 Corinthians 16:22; John 14:15
- The Word of God, the Bible – Psalm 119; 1 Thess. 2:12
- The kingdom, the church – Ephesians 5:25-27
- Brethren – 1 Peter 1:22; Heb. 13:1; John 13:34-35
- Souls of the lost – Luke 19:10; John 3:16-17; Matt. 16:24-27

Again, just where are your affections? Affections will determine our eternal destination. Considering yourself lest you also be tempted" (Gal. 6:1).

CHURCH BRIEFS

Pastor to celebrate anniversary

Pastor and Mrs. Ramon Smith will celebrate their 33rd anniversary at Second Christian Church on June 7 at 3 p.m., the church announced.

Special guest will be Morgan Gilkey of Paris, Kentucky.

The church is located at 106 Church St., Lawrenceburg.

Waddy concert series begins Friday

The Waddy Summer Concert series begins 7 p.m. Friday, June 5 at Waddy Baptist Church, 3130 Waddy Road, Waddy.

The first concert will feature The Lawson Family Band.

For Larry Lawson, singing comes naturally, according to a news release.

"I just grew up singing," said Lawson, who now sings with different family members in The Lawson Family Band. "My dad always played and sang and we just kept on doing it."

Lawson is often accompanied by various siblings which includes three brothers, and sometimes a son, daughter or other relations.

The free concerts are held outside in the church's picnic shelter. Visitors are welcome to bring lawn chairs to sit on. There is an adjacent playground for kids. Bottled water and soft drinks will be sold.

Concerts take place rain or shine. Future dates include July 10, Aug. 7 and Sept. 4. The second half of each concert will be open to anyone who wishes to take the stage and perform. Please bring your own instrument.

For more information contact Kent McKinney at 502-513-8100.

Southern gospel at Sand Spring Baptist

Southern gospel groups Karen Peck and New River along with the Jay Stone Singers will be in concert at Sand Spring Baptist Church, 1616 Harrodsburg Road, Lawrenceburg on Friday, June 5 at 7 p.m.

A love offering will be taken.

Free fishing this weekend

Sheriff's office to host event at Hope Community Church

From staff reports

Free fishing weekend is one of the best avenues to introduce kids to the wonders of fishing and launch a lifelong passion. This year, Free Fishing Weekend is Saturday, June 6 and Sunday, June 7 in Kentucky, according to a news release. "Free fishing weekend is a great tool for teaching kids how to fish," said John Gutzeit, aquatic education coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "This is also a great time for those lapsed anglers who've gotten away from fishing to get fishing again and come back into the fold."

Anglers across Kentucky may fish without a fishing license or need a trout permit on Free Fishing Weekend. Size and creel limits still apply during this time, according to the release.

Locations across Kentucky host special fishing events on Saturday, June 6. All events are held at local time and some provide loaner equipment, free bait and food. Here is a list of area fishing events held on June 6:

Franklin County: Anderson County Sheriff's Department D.A.R.E. Fishing Derby, Hope Community Church Lake, 5930 U.S. 127 South, Frankfort near the Franklin/Anderson county line. Fishing from 8 to 11 a.m. Two age groups, age 10 and under and ages 10 to 15. Lunch provided at 11 a.m. Anglers should bring own fishing equipment. Trophies for biggest fish, door prizes.

Franklin County: Family fishing day, Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' main campus, No. 1 Sportsman's Lane, Frankfort. Lower Lake will remain open during daylight hours for all anglers throughout the weekend. Upper lake will close to public fishing Friday, June 5 and Saturday, June 6 until 3 p.m. Upper Lake open for youth fishing only from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, June 6 and will reopen to all anglers after 3 p.m. Upper Lake will receive special stockings of catfish and hybrid bluegill. Anglers should bring fishing equipment and bait.

Football camp dates set

From staff reports

The annual Anderson County Bearcat Youth Football Camp will be held from Monday, June 15 through Thursday, June 18, according to Bearcat head coach Mark Peach. The camp sessions will be held at Anderson County High School.

The camp fee is $60 per camper if pre-registered, $65 at the door the first day of camp. Checks should be made out to ACHS Football.

The camp is open for students entering the grades 2-6 and will be held from 9 a.m. until noon each day.

For more information, contact Peach at 502-839-0366 or mark.peach@anderson.kyschools.us.

Hoops camp next week

From staff reports

The Anderson County Bearcat Basketball Camp will be held from June 8-11 at various local school gymnasiums, according to a news release.

The camp times are 9 a.m. until 2 p.m., with camp staff present an hour before and after each camp session, the release said. The camp is open to children entering kindergarten through the eighth grade.

The camp offers individual and team instruction, competitive games and drills, team competitions, individual awards and a learning atmosphere, according to the release.

The cost of the camp is $70 per camper, if registered in advance, and includes a zippered drawstring backpack and a basketball. First-day registration is $75.

Those entering kindergarten through third grade will report to Turner Elementary School while fourth- and fifth-graders should report to Saffell Street School. The came for grades 6-8 will be held at Anderson County High School.

For more information, contact Anderson County boys' basketball coach Glen Drury at 502-600-2482.

Lady Bearcats rally, repeat as region champs

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

INDEPENDENCE, Ky. - There were not many nails left to bite on when Autumn Beasley stepped to the plate last Thursday. Trailing 1-0 with two out, but two on in the bottom of the fifth inning of the Eighth Region championship game, fifth-ranked Anderson County needed a break in the worst way to overcome upset-minded Collins.

Beasley, hitting in the nine spot in the Lady Bearcat order, provided it with a deceptively slow grounder that somehow made it through the Collins infield.

Pinch runner Jenni Beasley, no relation to Autumn, raced around third then slid under a high throw to get Anderson on the board.

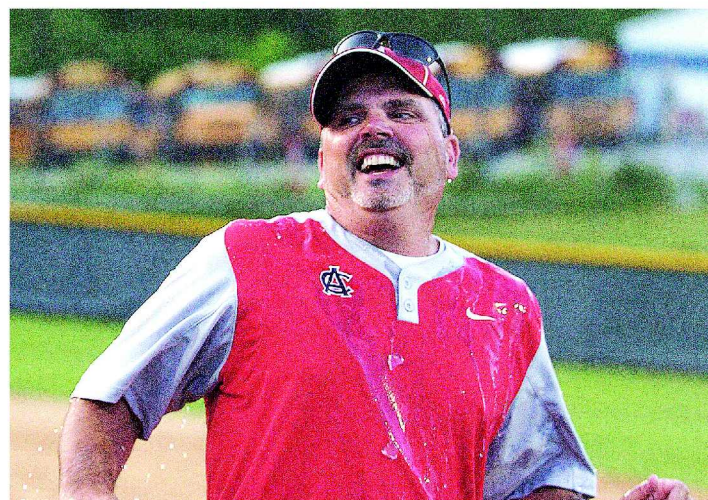

It was the push the Lady Bearcats went on to claim a 3-1 win and their second consecutive Eighth Region championship. Anderson, now 30-8, will play Central Hardin in the first round of the Worth/KHSAA State Fastpitch Tournament Thursday in Owensboro.

Autumn Beasley said she was not nervous when she stepped to the plate. "It was for my teammates," she said. "I would do anything for them. I was just trying to get on any way I can."

Most importantly, the run seemed to settle an Anderson team that appeared nervous under the weight of year-long expectations to repeat as regional champs.

"I thought after that, our kids definitely relaxed," Anderson coach Brent Aldridge said.

Indeed. While Collins

pitcher Carson Murray got out of the inning without further damage, the Lady Bearcats got the offense they needed in the sixth when they plated the decisive two runs.

Robinson never backs down from challenge

Anderson shortstop credits teammates for ride that ends this week with most wins and titles in school history

Countless athletes around the world would love to have Corrin Robinson's problem.

It's a problem, only if you really want to call it that.

That so-called problem is that she wins so much that no one seems to know how many times she has been victorious in her high school athletic career.

Told you a lot of people would like problems like that.

Here's what we know: She has played in at least 285 wins as an Anderson County Lady Bearcat softball and basketball player. She's been on her sports' biggest stages, the state tournaments, five times.

That win number could be much higher. Since becoming a regular varsity contributor as a seventh-grader in the 2009-2010 school year, Anderson County basketball and softball teams have a combined 285-117 record, three basketball regional titles, two regional basketball runner-up finishes and two berths in the state softball tournament.

What we don't know is how much higher that win total is. But it's doubtful anyone has played in more winning games as an Anderson County Bearcat.

"I dressed for basketball when I was in the sixth grade, but didn't play much," Robinson says. "In softball I (pinch-) ran some that year."

For the record, during Robinson's sixth grade year, Anderson softball went 23-8 while basketball was 20-7 and regional runner-up. It is just uncertain how many times she appeared in games that year.

It is apparent that Corrin Robinson's five regional championships are the most in Anderson County history.

In her career there have also been 11 district championships (6 basketball and 5 softball) and many more weeks ranked in the state's Top 25 in the respective sports.

And for the record, the shortstop-point guard-defensive-whiz is still going.

The girl who looked way too small to be playing varsity sports back in 2009 will see the high school portion of her athletic career come to an end this weekend in Owensboro at the Worth/KHSAA State Softball Tour-

SPORTS BRIEFS

Cann bleeds Blue, becomes a Wildcat

From staff reports

Former Anderson County High School basketball star Makenzie Cann has announced she will be transferring from the University of Cincinnati to the University of Kentucky to continue her basketball career. Cann made the announcement on Twitter and Facebook shortly before Anderson News sports deadlines.

Cann told The News her choice came down to Kentucky and Florida Gulf Coast. Cann played in all 31 games for Cincinnati last season, starting one. She averaged 7 points a game and hit 36.7 percent of her 3-point shots, which was better than any player on the Kentucky roster. More on Cann becoming a Wildcat in the June 10 Anderson News.

STATE SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT BRACKET

2015 WORTH/KHSAA SOFTBALL STATE TOURNAMENT

Lady Cats not top pick, but still swinging for state title

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Not many are picking Anderson County to bring home the big trophy from the Worth/KHSAA State Softball Tournament Saturday, but few are predicting a quick trip for the Lady Bearcats either.

While most of the discussion centers on top-ranked McCracken County and second-ranked Madisonville, one of the teams that pops up when talking about a dark horse candidate is Anderson County.

Anderson is certainly capable of making a long run.

At least Collins coach Charlie LeCompte thinks so.

“Most definitely,” LeCompte said after Anderson had defeated Collins in the Eighth Region championship game. “Their 3-4-5 hitters (Bailey Curry, Mia Aldridge and Kaci Currens) are as good as anybody in the state. Their pitching (Aldridge and Ally Moore) might not be as fast, but they are spot-on and their defense is second to none. I definitely think they have a chance to win it all. They don’t give you anything. You have to earn everything against them.”

So far in the post-season, Anderson has outscored its opponents 36-3 and Lady Bearcat pitching has not given up an extra base hit since the last game of the regular season at Woodford County.

The fifth-ranked Lady Bearcats have played all four teams ranked above them, losing to McCracken, Madisonville and Male, but beating Scott County at home, 7-3, when Mia Aldridge hit a grand slam, then Courtney Gale Hawkins hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning.

The Lady Cats feel they could have won all the games against the higher-ranked teams.

If Anderson wins and the rankings hold for the other teams, the Lady Bearcats would face McCracken in the second round, the same as last year when McCracken routed Anderson, 10-0. The Lady Bearcats could also play Madisonville and Male before getting to the championship game of the double-elimination tournament.

But that is a big “if.” The Lady Bearcats figure to have one of the tougher tasks in the first round when they take on 12th-ranked Central Hardin, the Fifth Region champion. Central Hardin comes in with a 32-7 record with one game ending in a tie. The Bruins have won 19 of their last 20, the only blemish coming in that 6-6 tie with North Laurel.

“I do not know much about Central Hardin,” Anderson coach Brent Aldridge says. “They are a good program and well-coached. It will be a tough game so we will need to be ready. I will reach out to some (Central Hardin opponents’) coaches this week.

“Central Hardin is ranked No. 12 according to the coaches’ poll, so they will be a tough opponent. I believe once the girls hear that, they will be focused.”

Anderson and Central

Kaci Currens takes a big cut against Collins. She drove in two runs against Oldham County then brought the clinching run home against Collins in the regional tournament.

Hardin met in the 2008 state tournament with the Lady Bearcats taking a 5-3 win in the fourth round. The current players would have been in elementary school at that time, with seniors being in the fifth grade.

In the second game, Anderson will play either McCracken or Third Region champ Daviess County on Friday morning.

A year ago, McCracken was ranked No. 1 all season and had made its way into the Top 25 nationally. The Mustangs were a heavy favorite to win the state title in the school’s first year of existence after Lone Oak, Reidland and Heath, all softball powers, consolidated. It didn’t work out that way, however, as Scott County came home with the title.

This year, McCracken is still the favorite, but Madisonville is nipping at the Mustangs’ heels. The next three teams in the statewide rankings, Male, Scott County and Anderson County, are all in the top bracket.

“What makes McCracken and Madisonville tough is they have athletes at every position,” Aldridge says. “Their pitching is very good and the batters are going to put the ball in play. They can be beaten but teams are going to have to hit and play a clean game.

“Scott County lost a few key players last year but has improved each game. It wouldn’t surprise me if Scott made another run. Male is very well coached and will hit, so they are another solid team to contend with.”

Aldridge says a team Anderson was scheduled to play but did not due to a rain out, is worthy to keep an eye on.

“I would watch East Jessamine in the lower bracket,” he says. “They definitely have a chance to make it to the final game. However, I believe the winner will come out of the top.”

That’s where McCracken County, Madisonville, Male and Scott County are all perched.

Along with Anderson County.

“Last year didn’t end the way we wanted it to,” said Anderson pitcher Allyson Moore, “but we are back.”

ROBINSON

nament.

She has signed to play softball at Georgetown College next year.

Suiting up for varsity games over 400 times looks like an eternity, but Robinson says the memories of hitting a 3-point shot at Diddle Arena or winning the district softball tournament as a seventh-grader are still vivid. “It all feels like it is just yesterday,” she says with a smile.

Looking at Robinson, one probably would not imagine the enormous success she has had. She stands only 5-foot-2, but is deceptively quick, can shoot the basketball from long range and has a cannon disguised as her right arm.

And, as her various coaches have said over the years, no one can measure the heart.

“I have to give all the credit to my teammates,” Robinson says of her success. “Without my team, I would not have gotten any of it done. You put in hard work and you put in all the time you can.”

Robinson has seen it all up close and personal. She was there the night the Lady Bearcat basketball team rallied from 10 points down inside the final 90 seconds to win the regional title. Then a sophomore, Robinson bagged a pair of free throws to tie the game.

She was there a year ago, watching when teammate Kaci Currens blasted a home run in the 12th inning to send the Lady Bearcat softball team to the state tourney.

And she was getting ready to hit when Mia Aldridge and Currens belted back-to-back doubles to give Anderson the winning margin in its win over Collins for another regional title last Thursday night.

They’ve all been sweet, but one moment stands out. “Making the (basketball) Final Four was pretty good,” she says of her sophomore season. “Getting beat by Marion County was pretty tough, but they are some great memories. Without these great teams, I would not have been able to get any of this done.”

It is kind of fitting that no one knows how many more games Corrin Robinson will play as an Anderson County Lady Bearcat. The double-elimination format used at the state softball tournament guarantees the fifth-ranked Lady Bearcats will play at least two more games.

To reach the ultimate goal of a state title, teams have to play at least five games and as many as nine in three days.

And while most are forecasting top-ranked McCracken County and No. 2 Madisonville will fight it out for the title, some are pointing to Anderson as one of those teams good enough to make a run at the title.

“I think we have a great chance,” Robinson says. “I don’t have any doubt in our team. McCracken County beat us once this year. We gave them a good run and had a few errors.

“We have nothing to lose and no reason to back down.”

It’s how Corrin Robinson has won at least 285 games.

And she’s not planning to stop yet.

Curry puts exclamation point on Lady Cat win over Oldham

Aldridge throws two-hitter on short notice

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

INDEPENDENCE, Ky. - As soon as Bailey Curry swung, everyone knew it was over.

Curry knew it. The fans in attendance at the Eighth Region Softball Tournament knew it.

And Oldham County knew it.

Curry, who had seen 13 pitches in drawing three walks throughout Wednesday's showdown, turned what appeared to be a mistake by Oldham pitcher Kristen Smith into the exclamation point on Anderson's 5-0 win in the regional semifinal. Curry's seventh-inning rocket was so decisive that the Oldham outfield simply watched the ball soar out of the park for Curry's 16th home run of the season.

Marissa Walker, who had beaten out an infield hit, scored ahead of Curry.

"Coming into the game, I knew I was going to get walked," Curry said, remembering Oldham's strategy in a 2-1 win over the Lady Bearcats in the Capitol City Classic on April 18. "I realized I didn't need to swing and just wait for that pitch to come.

"The ball was up there so I just swung."

Anderson coach Brent Aldridge was surprised that something got in Curry's round-house.

"I can't believe they pitched to her," he said. "I think (Smith) missed her spot because I don't think Steve (Leanhart, the Oldham coach) wanted to pitch to Bailey."

Anderson was already in control, scoring single runs in the first, third and fourth innings. With Mia Aldridge dealing a two-hit shutout, the finishing touches on the Lady Bearcats' trip to the finals were only a formality.

Aldridge walked two and saw Oldham get just one runner, Brittany Ryan, get past second base. Ryan walked to lead off the bottom of the fifth, then advanced to third on a pair of ground outs. With the outcome still in doubt, Anderson third baseman Autumn Beasley snagged Payton Hamm's soft liner to end Oldham's threat.

Even though the Lady Bearcats were charged with two errors,

Bailey Curry, left, hams it up with Mia Aldridge after the duo had big roles in Anderson County's regional semifinal win over Oldham County.

Brent Aldridge noted, "That was probably the best defensive game we have played all year. When we made mistakes, we recovered."

Curry might have turned in the play of the night when Old-ham's Whitney Messing reached first on an error to lead off the third. Kaci Currrens' throw eluded first baseman Katelyn Harrod, but Curry, backing up the play fired to shortstop Corrin Robinson, who easily placed the tag to retire messing.

"That play was huge," Brent Aldridge said.

Anderson had put Oldham in a hole before Mia Aldridge threw her first pitch. Marissa Walker doubled with one out in the first, then scored on Currrens' two out single.

"That was really big. It kind of calmed me down," said Mia Aldridge, who was not scheduled to start. A hand injury to Ally Moore thrust Aldridge to the pitching circle.

"I thought she pitched pretty well," Brent Aldridge said.

"She did get behind in the count some, but did a good job coming back."

Mia Aldridge gave up two walks and struck out just one in picking up the win. "My defense was really good behind me and made the plays they need to make," she said.

Anderson scored again in the third when Walker was hit by a pitch, then came home on Currrens' sacrifice fly. Walker made it a complete night when her two-out single drove in Corrin Robinson in the fourth.

Oldham never seriously threatened as Aldridge fired the Lady Bearcats' third shut out in four tournament games.

Anderson improved to 29-8 while Oldham saw its string of three consecutive regional finals end. The Colonels finished at 22-16.

CHAMPIONS

Curry dropped a flare just inside the right field foul line. Mia Aldridge followed with a blast to the left field corner that scored courtesy runner Courtney Gale Hawkins, giving Anderson the lead.

The decisive run came when the umpire ruled that Hawkins had just beaten the tag by Collins catcher Janelle Hynes even though the ball appeared to beat Hawkins to the plate. There was no protest from Collins on the play.

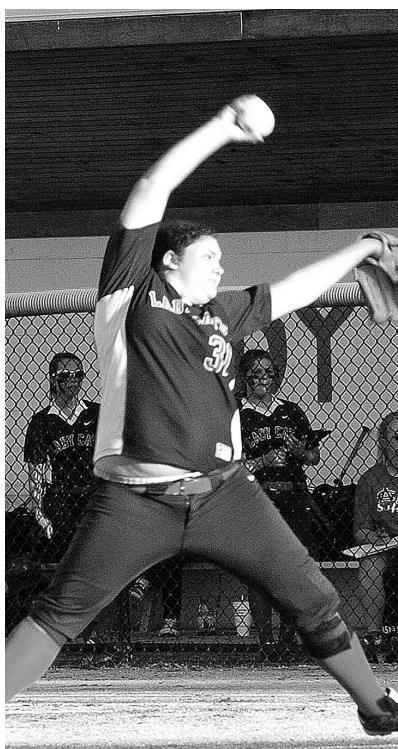

"I did not have a good look at the play," Anderson coach Brent Aldridge said. "I do know their catcher was playing back a little and it could have gone either way. The ball beat (Hawkins) but with those kind of plays you don't know what is going to happen."

Anderson's Kaci Currrens followed with another double that just missed going out of the park, scoring Aldridge with an insurance run.

The memory of the teams' regular season meeting - Collins scored a 2-1 upset - added to the weight Anderson appeared to be feeling through the night. A team that had been averaging 8 runs a game in the post-season and had whipped Collins, 6-2, in the 30th District final, Anderson had two hits before Katelyn Harrod ripped a key single in the fifth.

Harrod's safety advanced Jenni Beasley, running for Alissa Vest, to second setting up Autumn Beasley's big hit.

"We were freaking out trying to get a run," Curry said of the mood on the Anderson bench before Beasley got the Lady Cats on the board. "We always play better when we just calm down and believe in each other."

Ally Moore pitches against Collins. Despite a sore hand, she held the Titans scoreless for five innings and got the win in the regional final.

To say the Lady Bearcats were once again excited is the understatement.

"I think we all pretty much lost our voices," Curry laughed. "We had been really, really tight. That turned the game around."

Senior shortstop Corrin Robinson added, "Everybody in the dugout was going crazy. A few of us about jumped over the fence. It was pretty crazy."

And the transformation started.

"I sensed they were pressing," Collins coach Charlie LeCompte said. "They were concerned, then they got those two hits back-to-back. That was definitely the turning point."

Collins had put the pressure on quickly when Poehlein led off the game with a single, then scored when Murray singled, but the ball got through Anderson center fielder Sammy Rogers for a two-base error. Murray was stranded at third, the last Collins runner to make it past second base.

"I kept telling the girls after every inning one run is not going to win this game," LeCompte said. "I said we have to score. We have to string something together."

While Collins had base runners in every at-bat, the Titans never had more than one on in any of the final six frames against Anderson juniors Mia Aldridge, who started, and Ally Moore, who pitched the last five.

"I just thought Mia looked tired," Brent Aldridge said of the decision to lift his daughter to start the third. "She had pitched late (in Wednesday's win over Oldham County) and was coming back tonight."

Moore had originally been slated to pitch against Oldham but was experiencing some tendonitis, causing some swelling in her right pitching hand. She did not have her best stuff but held Collins scoreless.

"To be honest, my hand is a little numb," Moore smiled a few moments after picking up the win in the regional final for the second straight year. "I was a little surprised, but (Brent Aldridge) had told me to be ready."

Moore was never in serious trouble but when she went 3-and-0 to Poehlein with two out in the seventh, Coach Aldridge paid a visit to the circle. "I told her just make them hit it and don't give any free passes," he said. "Make them hit it and trust your defense."

Poehlein singled but Moore got Cassie Rannels to fly out to end the game.

LeCompte saw his team advance to the regional final in his first year as head coach. "I said, 'Girls, you have nothing to be ashamed of,'" he said. "Nobody, not the newspapers, not the coaches, nobody expected us to be here."

Collins finished at 24-11.

Anderson's players said they were concerned but confident they would pull out the win.

"We had to believe in our team," said senior Marissa Walker.

But at a time when one loss ends the season, Aldridge, th coach, was churning inside.

"I was extremely worried," Brent Aldridge said of the fifth-inning deficit. "You give Collins a little bit of life and they keep coming at you."

"It is so hard to repeat. I think the girls were a little bit tense because there was so much pressure on them."

Walker heads all-tournament team

From staff reports

Anderson County's Marissa Walker was named Most Valuable Player of the 2015 Eighth Region Tournament. In three games, Walker hit .444 with four runs scored and 2 RBI. Walker also made a pair of key running catches in right field for the regional champions.

Other members of the All-Tournament team are Mia Aldridge, Bailey Curry and Kaci Currrens of Anderson County; Shelbi Poehlein, Carson Murray and Hannah Renfro of Collins; Taylor Sheller and Payton Hamm of Oldham County; Megan Rohrbach and Samantha Maiocco of North Oldham; Simon Kenton's Anna Telesz; Henry County's Kelsey Sheperd; Alex Ellis of Grant County and Shelby Gambrell of Owen County.

Curry named region's Player of Year

From staff reports

Anderson County catcher Bailey Curry has been named the Eighth Region Player of the Year for the second consecutive year. A sophomore, Curry has hit 16 home runs and driven in 47 through 38 games for the regional champions. Curry has 59 hits through the regional tournament, hitting .557.

The team was announced at the Eighth Region championship game Thursday night at Simon Kenton High School.

Other members of the 2015 All-Region team are Mia Aldridge and Sammy Rogers of Anderson County; Hannah Dossett of Gallatin County; Shelbi Poehlein of Collins; Owen County's Shelby Gambrell; Shelby County's Hannah Webb; Sam Maiocco and Erin Parker of North Oldham; Henry County's Aly Stanley and Madison Rabourn; Samantha Perkins of Simon Kenton; Kristen Smith and Delaney Sowell of Oldham County and Kayla Baker of Trimble County.

Anderson County's Brent Aldridge was named the region's Coach of the Year.

A Newer Science

Ecology is the study of relationships among living things and their environment. While there was talk of ecology in the 1800s, it did not become an actual science until the 1900s.

Scientists who study ecology are called ecologists. They look at many things from where plants and animals live to how they depend upon each other to survive.

Ecologists have their own area of interest. Some study certain animal groups, while others study certain areas of the earth.
